

NZUGA Buffet Supper & AGM

In the Penthouse Suite, New Zealand House, Haymarket, London SW1Y 4TQ
On Friday, 5 October 2018 at 6:15 p.m.

New World/Old World Producing Art History in Aotearoa New Zealand

Featuring our speaker: Christina Barton
Director of the Adam Art Gallery Te Pātaka Toi

Christina is in London to attend a flurry of exhibitions featuring artists and art works from New Zealand and the Pacific, from the Oceania exhibition at the Royal Academy to the 2018 Turner Prize show at Tate Britain, which features the Fijian/New Zealander, Luke Willis Thompson as one of the four finalists. Her timing is fortuitous as it allows us to learn about her important contributions to art history in Aotearoa New Zealand, as an academic, writer, and curator and through her leadership of the Adam Art Gallery, New Zealand's leading university art gallery, housed in a stunning building designed by the late Sir Ian Athfield on Victoria University's Kelburn Campus.

Her address will follow an informal supper & brief AGM. Admittance is at a charge of £20 per person. If paid in advance a discount of £2 (i.e. price £18 each) will apply and includes buffet. Cash bar for liquid refreshment. Please arrive between 6:15 pm and 7:00 pm. For security reasons the guest list will be checked on the ground floor. Advance booking is required as space is limited.

The event is open to all; members, non-members and non-graduates are all equally welcome.

Christina Barton

Christina Barton has been Director of the Adam Art Gallery since 2007. Prior to taking up this role she was a senior lecturer in Art History at Victoria University of Wellington and she continues to teach and research as a member of her academic community. She is recognised as one of New Zealand's leading curators and writers, having previously worked at the Museum of New Zealand Te Papa Tongarewa (1992-1994) and Auckland Art Gallery (1987-1991). She has published widely on contemporary New Zealand art and is co-editor of Reading Room, a journal of contemporary art and visual culture.

NZUGA

The New Zealand University Graduates' Association holds 3 suppers annually, where a speaker is invited to talk on a field of interest to New Zealanders. The NZUGA seeks to bring New Zealand graduates and friends in the UK together in an arena of mutual interest in socialising, discussion and learning. Please visit www.nzuga.co.uk for more info.
